List of members in v. 7-15, 17, 19-20. Provocative revelations about the flourishing black women's intellectual traditions in nineteenth-century America This text attempts to document the extent and nature of mental health problems in rapidly growing Third World cities. A selection of the latest research results is presented alongside practical guidelines for undertaking such research. The policy implications for local service providers and public health agencies are also discussed. As a North American of European ancestry, Victoria Freeman sought to answer the following question: how did I come to inherit a society that has dispossessed and oppressed the indigenous people of this continent? After seven years of research into her own family's involvement in the colonization of North America, she uncovered a story that begins in England, in 1588, and concludes in Ontario, in the 1920s. Among many others, we meet Puritan fur-trader and interpreter Thomas Stanton, who in 1637 participated in a genocidal war against the Pequots of New England, and nine-year-old Elisha Searl, who was captured in Massachusetts in 1704 by Native allies of the French, eventually becoming a "white Indian," but was eventually "deprogrammed" by the Puritans. Through both the ordinary and remarkable episodes in her ancestors' lives, and her own travels to the places where her ancestors lived, she illuminates the process of North American colonization. Freeman neither demonizes nor whitewashes her ancestors, but instead attempts to understand their actions and choices both in the context of their time and with the benefit of hindsight. Mark Hall takes the powerful story of the Woman at the Well and her encounter with Jesus to help readers understand that the "wells" we go to for life and sustenance, the "wells" of success, talent, control, favor, religion, etc., are keeping us from relying on Jesus and his abundant life, and we will never be truly satisfied until we realize that and go to Him for our needs. Shocked by the idea that some people believe that God hates _____s, Pastor Marcia Carrier describes a new way of thinking about God and His love for all people. I Still Have Many Things to Say to You (But You Cannot Bear them Now) explores the sheer awesome and unconditional love God has for each of us. This is a must read for anyone who has questioned their faith or whether or not they are chosen. Pastor Marcia gives a convincing argument that we cannot even comprehend how much God loves us and chooses us. Readers will finish this book feeling renewed in their faith and confident that God hates no one. Jenny Nettlesheim The essentials of the Christian faith, from Creation to the Second Coming, are explained by a layman for laypeople. From a traditional evangelical perspective, well grounded in Scripture, the author concludes that the Kingdom of God is accessed across a bridge of faith and under a white flag, surrendering the believers time, talents, energy and resources to the King. This book will prepare Christian witnesses to give their testimony on behalf of the gospel.
